TOMPSON IN FAILED BANK.

Was Formerly Trust Officer and Director of Bank That Failed in Kansas City.

Four complaints growing out of the closing of the American Union Trust company at Kansas City recently were issued Saturday by Edward J. Curtin, assistant prosecuting attorney, and sent to Justice C. J. Welch for hearing.

One of the accused men was J. W. Tompson, formerly a director of the bank, who is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

The charges against Tompson and Richardson and Burch, two other accused men, are relative to a $5,000 loan made at the trust company last May. Mr. Curtin said, "Burch owned eighty acres of land in Nodaway county, worth about $4,000, with a $1,500 mortgage on the property. He was represented at the bank to be a wealthy land owner, easily worth $5,000, according to the information that I am acting on, and $5,000 was lent him on his note. I have a letter in which Richardson and Tompson agree to pay the note. I have learned that Burch has since transferred the land to his brother. He is said to have gone to Nebraska."

Tompson was at one time trust officer of the company, and also a member of the board of directors of the bank. He severed his connection with the bank some time last summer, it is said, and went to Florida in the interest of a Kansas City investment company. After the bank had been closed about two weeks Tompson returned to Kansas City, and at once sought John E. Swanger, state bank commissioner, saying he had heard he was wanted.

Tompson appeared in Justice C. J. Welch's court in Kansas City Monday morning.

REVIVAL MEETINGS.

Opened Sunday at the First M. E. Church With Large Attendance.

The revival services at the First M. E. church opened Sunday, and Dr. Calfee, the evangelist, preached at both morning and evening services to large audiences. Dr. Calfee made a fine impression, and no doubt great interest will be taken in the meetings.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Calfee spoke to the men and boys on "The up-to-date Movements of the Church for the Men and Boys." He gave a fine description of the work of the movement.

The meetings will continue every night this week at 7:30 o'clock. On Saturday night, instead of regular preaching service a boys' rally will be held in the basement of the church. On Thursday afternoon at 4:15 in the basement there will be a girls' rally service. There will be an afternoon meeting every afternoon at the church except Saturday, and all are invited to attend.

Evangelist Calfee has been in Maryville before. He was here twenty-five years ago, having come to attend the big rally that Sam Jones held here. Mr. Calfee was then living in Mt. Airy, Ia.

GRIEF KILLED HER

LEONARD'S MOTHER MOURNED HER SON'S ABSENCE.

CAME TO TAKE BODY BACK

Mrs. Richard Keefe of Galesburg, Ill., Identifies Wm. Leonard as Long Absent Brother.

The body of William M. Leonard, which laid at the Price-McNeal undertaking rooms for nearly a week as that of an unknown man, will be taken to Galesburg, Ill., Monday night over the Burlington for burial by the side of his mother, who died ten years ago, grieving and longing for his return or some word that would tell her he was living or dead.

Accompanying the body is an only sister of the deceased man, Mrs. Richard Keefe of Galesburg, and her husband and daughter, Miss Hazel Keefe. Mr. Keefe, who is a farmer of near Galesburg, arrived in Maryville Sunday morning to make preliminary arrangements for the removal of the body and for still further proof that the body was indeed that of Mrs. Keefe's long lost brother.

Mrs. Keefe's long lost brother, Mrs. Keefe and daughter arrived Monday morning. They were confident as soon as they had received the letter from Messrs. Price and McNeal, written upon the advice of Mrs. Jerry Vaughn, living north of Maryville, which contained a picture of the dead man, that it was Mrs. Keefe's brother, and when they looked on his face at the undertakers' rooms they were satisfied that it was the body of William Leonard.

A short funeral service was held at the undertakers' rooms Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Father Niemann of St. Patrick's church, and another service—8 o'clock mass—will be held Tuesday morning at St. Patrick's church by Father Niemann.

William M. Leonard was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leonard, who lived on a farm west of Galesburg. Their only other child was the daughter, Alice, who came to Maryville Monday to keep the promise made to a dying mother: "If you should ever hear of Willie's death, find his body and bring it and place it by father and me. And if he should ever return, be very good to him, and tell him how I longed to see him and how much we loved him."

Mrs. Keefe spoke very quietly this morning in talking of her brother, but one could see that her grief was too deep for many words, and her love for her brother too sacred to allow a single word of reproach for his unaccountable absence of nineteen years.

"I live in the home he left," she said, "and our two little girls, Margaret and Marion, 19 and 12 years old, are there awaiting to see the dead face of their Uncle Will—whom they had always expected to see sometime—but not this way. He was the best and sweetest boy in the world. He always seemed happy and was liked by everybody. He liked to go out with the young people and was popular. Father's death occurred twenty-five years ago, and after his death mother clung to Will and loved him more than ever. He at first worked in a grocery store after quitting school, and was then took up railroad work, and was a fireman on the Burlington out of Galesburg for two years. He was dissatisfied with that, however, and said he was going to look for something else that he liked better. He went away then and we never heard a thing of him but once about a year later, when Mr. Keefe saw him in Chicago. He said he wasn't coming home for some time and did not know when he would come. He was very proud, and I know he had such high aims that when things did not come as he thought they would he could not bear us to know that he was not succeeding, so he stayed away and did not even write to us. But his silence killed my mother, and it has sometimes seemed to me that I could not stand it if he did not write or come home. I have always believed that we would hear of his death if it should occur. I can never be grateful enough to Ella Brennan (Mrs. Vaughn), my old neighbor and schoolmate, for the interest she has taken in getting the word of his death to me."

William Leonard was born on a farm west of Galesburg Ill., September 5, 1867, making him past 44 years of age. Though his life has not been the financial success he evidently wished it to be, he had lived a good moral life, for that was evident to the undertakers and to all who viewed the body.

When Mr. J. D. Frank, who sold Leonard some clothing the evening of his fatal fall from the Main street viaduct, was able to recall his name the third day after Leonard's death, Mrs. Vaughn told her husband she used to know a Leonard family back in Galesburg and inquired on his coming to Maryville to see the body and told him how old Will Leonard would be, and described his appearance so well that Mr. Vaughn, after seeing the body, insisted on her coming to town to see for herself. She remembered a mark in his eyebrow, or "cowlick," which was very noticeable, and his large blue eyes, and although she had not seen him for twenty years, she was quite certain that it was the body of Will Leonard, and such it proved to be.

The father of Mrs. Keefe and William Leonard died on his farm near Kinsley, Kan., where the family had moved for the benefit of both Mr. and Mrs. Leonard's health. Mr. Leonard's ailment was asthma. He was completely cured by the change, but he worked so hard putting out his orchard and small fruit that he brought on valvular heart trouble. One day while the daughter was out with her mother for their usual drive, Mr. Leonard died in his orchard a few minutes before their return. The family returned to the old home at Galesburg, and it is thought that the son grieved more deeply than they realized over his father's death. The father and son were strongly attached to each other, and after the father's death William was restless and did not seem to know what he wished to do.

BROUGHT DOWN TWO VICTIMS

But the Deer Hunter Got Surprise of His Life When He Examined Them.

One of the best hunting stories of the season comes from northern Wisconsin, where a prominent resident of Phillips, accompanied by a friend, slipped out of town one evening two days in advance of the legal opening day of the season for killing deer.
His object was to hunt deer at night
by the aid of a strong reflector, dark lantern. He succeeded in a way far beyond his most optimistic hopes in killing something, but his overwhelming surprise on first viewing the "game" may be better imagined than written, and his language was horrid.

He drove his own team of horses, valued at $600, and some distance from town he turned into an abandoned logging road, traversing it for several miles. Then he tied up the team and prowled about in the woods for half an hour with his light.

Suddenly he heard a snort, and the light revealed a pair of glaring eyes from some animal a short distance away. In his excitement he handed the light to his friend and banded at the eyes. Down tumbled the animal, and instantly there was a commotion
in the same spot, and the light revealed another pair of glaring eyes.
The hunter quickly fired and the second animal dropped.

The hunters rushed forward with their light, and to their dismay found that both their horses were shot and killed. They had circled about and confronted the team in their ramblings.

Something Missing.

Life guards at a Jersey seaside resort tell with great glee of an incident that happened there last summer. A German, with his boy of ten, was standing at the rail of one of the piers, quite at the end thereof, when suddenly the youngster toppled through into the water. As no life guards were out that far at the time a well dressed young collegian on the pier, without waiting to divest himself of shoes or clothing, jumped in and after battling with the waves for some minutes got the half-drowned boy to the beach. In the meantime the father had basted from the pier.

The parent, however, bore himself with great coolness. As the rescuer placed the dripping lad at his parent's feet, the German calmly inquired:
"Many tanks, but vot haf you done
mit his hat?"

Home Health Club

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER, LaPorte, Ind.

Preventable maladies—Dr. St. Clair Drake of the Chicago bureau of vital statistics, exhibited four panels at the opening of the City club lately, in which he demonstrated some startling facts connected with his specialty. The panels showed that out of 32,800 deaths in Chicago last year, 13,500 were caused by preventable diseases, that one baby out of five dies before 2 years of age, that many of the deaths from preventable diseases arise from bad ventilation. In 1911 there were 4,929 deaths, or 15 per cent of the total number of deaths in Chicago from pneumonia; in the same period there were 3,726, or 11 per cent from tuberculosis—consumption.

A great many persons laugh at the idea of prevention of disease. They say: "Do you suppose anyone is going to be sick just for the fun of it?" or,
"How is anyone to avoid being sick
if the disease gets after them?" And yet here is a scientific man, employed by a great city, who comes with indubitable facts and figures showing how frightful percentage of people in his baili-wick die from preventable diseases.

Any intelligent person knows that if he goes out in zero weather with his coat off and his collar thrown open and in summer shoes that he is going to get a severe illness—that he will probably "catch his death," as the old folks used to express it. Of course, this is an extreme example. But where are you going to draw the line? There are thousands of ways for obtaining disease that a strong, healthy person would laugh at. An old soldier who has a deep seated case of chronic rheumatism said to us a few days ago:
"During the war I was that strong and healthy it seemed as if a cannon ball would have some trouble hurting me very much. Many a time after a long and fatiguing march of many miles, in the heat and dust, when we would go into camp at night, I would throw myself down in the wet grass that seemed to be the most comfortable place I could think of to sleep. Older men would say, 'You'll pay for that, one of these days, youngster.' I could not understand why anything that didn't hurt me, right there and then, could hurt me years after, but I know now.
If I had taken the trouble to cool off in even the same way that a sensible horse handler would have used to take care of his horse that had been on a heating dash; dried myself properly and cooled off by sensible degrees, the chances are a thousand to one that I wouldn't be hanging to this pole of a walking stick right now, and I wouldn't be having the pains that rack me day and night."

This is another extreme case. But let us tell you, careless one, that when you cram your stomach with what you consider luxuries, and eat a big meal every time the dinner bell rings, whether you want it or not; when you sleep in a hot, unventilated room—or even a cold, unventilated room—or take alcoholic or other unnatural stimulants; use tobacco in any unreasonable way, or become a coffee fiend, drink water that is not pure, or indulge in any excess, or expose yourself unnecessarily, to inclement weather, no matter how young and strong you are, you are laying yourself liable to one of the preventable diseases that Dr. Drake has shown up. And yet there is nothing much more contemptible in personal habit than "molly-coddling." The Home Health club does not advise that by any manner of means.

Be temperate, use common sense,
fight for fresh, pure air and the same sort of water; cultivate good humor;
be kind and helpful; "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you," in which the Nazarene has said, "is all the law and the prophets," and the chances are that a preventable disease will never even reach the neighborhood of your good health.

Club Note.

Dear Doctor: Is there any cure for carbuncle? Have been troubled with them for the last five years. Had them removed three times and they are still growing and are very painful. I like your new department very much.

B. E. J.

A carbuncle means a destruction of the skin and the tissues directly beneath. It is most common with elderly or feeble person, and produces severe constitutional symptoms. Occasionally more than one carbuncle may appear on the body at one time, and if so the constitutional symptoms are apt to be graver.

Poultice the spot with flaxseed.
Sprinkle over with goldenseal. Have an incision made across the carbuncle, which should be cut deeply, and then apply the poultice as before, although it would be beneficial for you to mix it with a little powdered myrrh and glycerine. Apply around the edges compound tincture of myrrh. Change these poultices every four hours, also washing around the ulcerous surface with extract of witch hazel one ounce, borax one dram, warm water one pint.
A small syringe should be used. The stream will wash away all accumulations. While suppuration last these poultices should be constantly applied.
In order to keep up your general health and strength you should have a very nourishing diet, sufficient exercise and sleep in well ventilated rooms.

Fined for Cold Cars.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Street railway companies here were fined $1,500 by Municipal Judge Blake for insufficient heating of street cars. A motion to vacate the judgment and set aside the fines was made by attorneys representing the defendants and arguments on this were set for February 17. Witnesses from the health department testified that the temperature of the cars averaged between 41 and 44 degrees.

ite and the children killed. Possession of their oil land worth $100,000 was the supposed motive.

POWERS DEMAND INTERVENTION

England and Germany Are Reported Alarmed Over Mexican Situation.

HOLD AMERICA RESPONSIBLE

Monroe Doctrine Places Obligation on U. S.—Other Countries Said to Have Taken Similar Action—State Department Silent.

Washington, Feb. 12.—England and Germany, according to reports received here, have demanded of the United States that the American army intervene in Mexico and protect their interests there.

No official confirmation of this has yet been obtained, but there are reasons to believe that not only have these powers turned to America for protection in Mexico, but that other countries have made similar representations.

Under the Monroe doctrine no power may invade the soil of the Western hemisphere. This doctrine places the responsibility of the protection of foreign interests upon the United States and the obligation, the report says has been invoked.

Leaves No Alternative. Should these powers make their demand, there will be no alternative left to this country. The order for intervention would have to be issued.

The fact that these two countries have notified the United States that they look to this country for protection to their interests shows plainly enough that the reports of widespread revolt are not exaggerated.

A year ago when these countries turned to the United States for a guarantee that the rights of their citizens would be protected in Mexico, they put off the demand until the very last minute. Neither England nor Germany was disposed then to make the position of President Diaz any harder than necessary but, when it became evident that the Diaz government could offer no safety to any interest in the republic then these countries turned to the United States for protection of their interests.

The fact is not denied in official circles that the German ambassador has talked over the Mexican situation with Secretary Knox but the state department refuses to confirm the report that either Germany or England has demanded the United States that this country must go into Mexico and establish order.

"Respects Foreign Rights." Chihuahua, Mex., Feb. 12.—"Respect the rights of all private citizens and especially those of foreigners, since we want no international complications." This is the counsel given his followers by Inez Salazar, who has placed himself at the head of the rebels in the Galeana district, whose seat of government is in Casas Grandes.

Persons who arrived from Casas Grandes say that rebel bands proclaiming themselves adherents of Emilio Vasquez Gomez are scattered throughout the district. Salazar, who styles himself "colonel," has issued a manifesto almost identical to that of the mutineers at Juarez and naming the same junta of well-known Vasquistas.

STABBED PENITENTIARY WARDEN

Just as Chaplain Was About to Pronounce Benediction, Negro Slashes Officer.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 12.—Just as the prison chaplain was about to pronounce the benediction at the close of the morning chapel service at the state penitentiary, Albert Prince, a negro, under sentence for assault with intent to kill, stabbed a deputy warden, E. D. Davis. The warden received six wounds, three of them severe gashes in the abdomen. Physicians say he probably will die.

The negro obtained the knife from the broom factory. He says that he had no particular grievance against Davis, but that he objected to having been deprived of certain liberties. He was under a 20-year sentence.

TO VISIT SOUTHERN REPUBLICS

Secretary Knox to Make Trip to Acquire Information Regarding Conditions in Central America.

Washington, Feb. 12.—For the purpose of solving diplomatic problems and acquiring more accurate information as to conditions in central and northern South America, Secretary Knox, by direction of President Taft, will make a five-weeks' trip to the Spanish-American republics bordering the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Mexico.

As now planned Mr. Knox will not visit Mexico, but that country may be included in the program before he returns during the first week of April.

Although the official announcement of the trip just made public at the White house gave no details it was made known that Havana would be Mr. Knox's first stop, and it was reported that in Cuba he might attempt to "solve the problem" that brought about hints of American intervention there a few weeks ago.

Brilliant Wedding in London.

London, Feb. 12.—The most brilliant social function of the London present season took place at noon today, when Lady Rosabelle St. Clair Erskine, daughter of the earl of Rosslyn, was married to David Cecil Bingham, stepson of the former Mrs. Chauncey. The ceremony took place in the Guards' chapel, Wellington barracks, and was attended by a number of English army officers as well as the social elite of London. The bridesmaids were Lady Rosemary Leveson Gower, daughter of the duchess of Sutherland; Miss Lavania Bingham, Miss Barbara Bingham, Miss Helen Porteous, Miss Sheila MacDougal and Miss Christine Guthrie.

STRIKERS SEND CHILDREN AWAY

Textile Workers' Little Ones to Be Cared for by New Yorkers.

PARENTS MAY BE PROSECUTED

Authorities at Lawrence, Mass., Propose to Act Under Compulsory Education Laws—All Are to Be Cared for by Workmen.

New York, Feb. 12.—With red flags waving and bands blaring "The Marseillaise" 119 bewildered children were literally mobbed by the friendliest mob that ever was formed in America. The children were those whose mothers and fathers are braving the hardships of the textile workers' strike in Lawrence, Mass.

The children were sent here to be housed and fed while parents and older brothers and sisters fight out their differences with the Lawrence mill owners.

Taken to Labor Temple. They were marshaled into an elevated train and taken to the Labor Temple in Eighty-fourth street.

There the crowd had grown until entrance to the temple was barred and police reserves were summoned. Cold and hungry, unconscious of the attention they were attracting, once they reached the waiting supper tables, every little one fell to the work of devouring the first real meal many of them had faced since the strike at Lawrence began.

Mrs. Belmont's Offer Refused.

Before the arrival of the train that brought the children, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont went to the station and asked for several of the children, saying she would take them to her home and provide for them indefinitely. The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant of the Church of the Ascension sent a request for 25 children; Dr. James Warbasse of Brooklyn asked for six. All these requests were denied because of previous offers of temporary homes among the working people of the city.

Fifteen physicians thoroughly examined every child before they were given over to the persons who had volunteered to take care of them as long as the strike continues.

Prosecutions Threatened.

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 12.—Lawrence mill strikers, already worked up to a fever pitch by the manner in which they have been overruled by the military, were further incensed at the report that municipal authorities are planning, if possible, to prosecute every striker who sent his child to New York to be cared for during the strike. If the authorities find legal action can be taken they propose to begin prosecutions under the compulsory education laws. The officials also hope to be able to prosecute the strike leaders, who suggested sending the children away.

Silverman says he will get married. The girl in the case is Miss Agnes Fennelson, daughter of A. F. Fennelson, a banker of Hutchinson, Kan.

GIVES POLICY HOLDER A CHANCE

Ruling of Kansas Insurance Commission Will Improve Conditions of all New Policies.

Topeka, Feb. 12.—L. S. Lewis, state insurance commissioner, made a ruling that will improve the conditions of all life insurance policies written in Kansas after March 1. Many companies are writing policies that provide for a complete forfeiture of all premium payments, or part forfeiture in case of the death of one premium. The order issued by the insurance commissioner provides that in case a policyholder defaults in paying a premium, after having paid premiums for three years, that the insurance companies must give paid up insurance or cash according to definite insurance ratings.

LABOR WANTS TO RULE ENGLAND

Not Satisfied With Gains Already Made, Wants More.

TO DOMINATE FOREIGN POLICY

Propagandists Busy all Over Country Threaten Strikes Unless Given Control—Starting Daily Papers.

London, Feb. 12.—Since the Liberal party returned to power in 1905, and particularly since it has depended for its political life on the support of the Labor and Nationalist parties, more legislation of the kind advocated by trades unions has been enacted than in any similar period in the history of the country. Still, labor or at least the Independent Labor party is not satisfied and has arranged a program which contains expectations much greater.

Ben Turner, ex-president of the party says its business now is to make it the dominating, controlling, guiding and ruling party of the state.

To Stop Unemployment.

For the immediate future the party's platform contains planks looking to the further improvement of the conditions of labor; a right to work bill, that is a law making it obligatory upon the government to provide work for those desiring it; the abolition of night work as far as possible; a land policy, which would place the workers on the land until the nationalization of land has been accomplished; the nationalization of railways and mines and bills for the improvement of the housing of working men.

Not for Women Suffrage.

On the extension of the franchise there is a wide difference of opinion among the leaders. At a recent conference the delegates from the miners' federation let it be known that they would be satisfied with the bill to be introduced by the prime minister granting manhood suffrage, and would not vote in favor of a motion supporting women suffrage.

The propagandists are busy in the country, rallying men to the unions and threatening strikes unless non-unionists are prevented from working side by side with trades unionists.

To Dominate Politics.

Two labor daily papers are about to make their appearance. One, the Daily Herald, is to take the place of the Morning Leader, which is to be amalgamated with the Daily News. The other is to be the Daily Citizen, and it will be the official organ of the party. A fund of $750,000 is being raised to make a start, and the party has subscribed $30,000 toward this.

The leaders have set themselves the task of increasing the labor representation in the house of commons from 42 to 142 and with this concrete party they believe they can dominate not only home but also foreign policies.

Died to Save His Wife.

Seymour, Ind., Feb. 12.—While trying to rescue his wife from their burning home, Charles King, 70 years old, a Civil war veteran, died suddenly of heart trouble, induced by excitement. Mrs. King was confined to her bed with a broken leg. Her charred body was recovered.

Ask T. R. to Run.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—A memorial was sent to Theodore Roosevelt asking him, on behalf of a number of people to become a candidate for president. The action was taken by the governors of seven states, after a conference all day with men from every section of the country.

Army Ball March 16.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Feb. 12.—The annual ball of the West Point graduates stationed at army posts in this section of the country probably will be held in Kansas City March 16. Officers here who are graduates of that military school are now making plans for the ball.

WOMAN TO LEARN FARMING

TAKES COLLEGE COURSE TO PREPARE FOR MANAGEMENT.

Owns Her Own Place of 150 Acres and Will Operate it Herself.

Columbia, Mo., Feb. 12.—A young woman, the owner of a 150-acre farm in Boone county has just entered the University of Missouri college of agriculture to learn how to manage the land and make it a paying proposition. She is Miss Pauline Chandler, the daughter of John Chandler, a wealthy farmer and owner of the Courtland farm a few miles out of Columbia. She is the first woman to enroll in the class of farm management at the university.

Besides farm management Miss Chandler is studying crop production, landscape gardening, crop rotation, plant propagation and field crop management.

This coming summer the young woman farmer expects to raise a carload of baby beavers.

Miss Chandler's farm was given to her by her father. He will have nothing to do with the management and all that she makes will be hers to do with as she pleases. She says that she will not import any of her stock from the West or other places, but will raise all of it for fattening.

Miss Chandler is 20 years old. Last spring she won second prize in horseback riding at the "county fair" of the students in the college of agriculture. The contest was open to all women students in the university.

THE CLOSED DOOR

By Temple Bailey

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Through his open window Bernard could hear the sound of a woman weeping. He leaned out into the silent summer night.

"Who is it?" he asked, softly. "Can I be of service?"

There was silence for a moment, then a timid voice responded: "If you could only let me in."

"Wait," Bernard whispered, and went down and opened the door.

A girl stood outside. She was all in white and wore her satiny dark hair wound youthfully about her head. There were signs of tears on her cheeks.

"Will you come in?" Bernard asked. She shrank back. "Oh, no, I did not mean that I wanted to come into your house. It is this other door that is closed against me."

With her hand she indicated the door adjoining, which led into the next house. "My uncle," she explained, "has locked me out. He wants me to do a thing I will not do, and until I consent he says I shall not come into his house. What shall I do?"

"Have you any friends?" Bernard asked.

"Have you any money?" Bernard asked.

"Yes; he gave me some. But it is so dark, I dare not go to a hotel at this time of night. I am afraid."

"And you cannot stay here—if my housekeeper had not gone—but I'll find a way." He smiled down at her. "Oh, if you could," she cried, hopefully.

"Is your uncle in?" he asked.

"Yes, but his room is in the front of the house. This is the garden entrance. I know he is there, because I can see his shadow on the other wall as he bends over his book."

"Good," said Bernard, "come in here with me, and I'll find you a way to your room, and when you get there

Saw the old man walking restlessly in the garden.

you can go to bed in the dark, and he will never be wiser. And in the morning you can come over here again, and we will plan together."

He led the way to the second story. It was an easy matter for him to lift her over the high railing to the porch which separated the two houses.

"Good night," he said, and in the dark she whispered, "Thank you so very much," and left him tingling with the pleasure of her praise.

He was ready and waiting when at dawn she crept out on the porch to be lifted back to his side and escorted downstairs, where he had a pot of coffee, toast and eggs waiting for her.

"We will have some breakfast," he said, "then we will hunt up my mother's old housekeeper. She married a farmer and lives about a half mile out. I am afraid I shall have to ask you to walk."

She walked by his side through the unawakened streets lightly and fearlessly. "I'm so glad to get away," she said as she looked back at the closed door which had so relentlessly shut her out. "I shall never come back if I can find anything to do."

"Would you mind," he hesitated, "telling me why you were shut out?"

She blushed. "He wanted me to marry a man I don't like," she said. "Uncle has strange ideas. He says that love can come after marriage."

"Not for you," he cried, looking down at the lovely face upraised to his, the gray eyes with shadowy lashes, the burnished hair. "Not for you."

"And I wouldn't. And last night I said 'No' finally, and sent the man away. And uncle was furious and turned me out."

"It would serve him right if we should frighten him a bit, wouldn't it?" asked Bernard. "If you'll stay quietly on the farm he will wonder what has become of you. Of course he expects to find you back this morning begging at the door."

When Bernard returned at noon that same day he saw the old man walking restlessly in the garden.

"Have you seen my niece," he questioned suspiciously, as Bernard came up.

"I heard some one last night sobbing in the garden," said the young man.

"It was Lois," said the other. "I meant to play a joke on her. She must have taken me seriously and gone away."

"What was your joke?" Bernard questioned gravely.

"I made her think I was angry, and locked the door on her."

Bernard looked toward the river that flowed sluggishly at the foot of the garden.

"She might have gone that way," he said.

The old man clutched at his arm. "You don't mean—you don't mean—" he quavered.

"Who knows?" said the astute Bernard, and shrugged his shoulders. After that the old man frantically appealed to him. "Will you help me look for her?" But Bernard shook his head. "If you found her, what then?" he asked.

Then Bernard told him, "She is with a farmer's wife on the outskirts of the town. But you must not go to her. She is not in a mood to forgive you."

"Thoroughly humbled, the old man asked, 'What shall I do?'"

"Write her a note, and I will take it," said Bernard, and thus it came about that he was the messenger between these two.

"I will never go back," the girl declared passionately. "I must find some work to do. I want to earn my living, and be free."

"Martha is glad to have you with her," he said; "don't worry."

But she was still burdened with the thought of her dependence, until one day he came and found her radiant.

"I am going to make marmalade and sell it to the people where Martha's husband delivers butter. I have a delicious recipe. It was my mother's. She was a California woman, and her orange marmalade was famous. And even if I begin in a small way I can pay Martha something."

His heart rejoiced to see her happy, and he rejoiced, too, to know that she would stay where he might see her daily.

One morning her uncle went with him to the farm.

"Come back with me, Lois," he begged, but she shook her head.

"I may seem hard," she said, "but there is always before me the vision of that closed door, and of you on the other side of it, deaf to all my pleadings."

Bernard and the old man grew to be good friends. They sat often in the garden and talked of Lois. "If I could only have her back," the old man would sigh.

One morning Bernard said, "I am going to ask her to come—but if she does, she must live on my side of the garden."

"You mean?" the old man gasped. "That I want to marry her," said Bernard.

"Go ask her—go ask her," the other urged, eagerly. "Maybe she will do for you what she would not do for me."

But when Bernard asked her, Lois shook her head. "You are sorry for me," she said, "that's why you are doing it."

He took both of her hands in his. "I shall be very sorry for myself," he said gently, "if you close the door of your heart against me. Just think of me as standing without, begging to be let in."

Woodpile Philosopher.

Erastus Johnson, the only colored man in Kobrook-in-the-Hills, has thought out many of the secrets of easing the toll that he knows best, and is ever ready to impart them to others.

"When they comes to me for advice," he said recently to one of the summer campers, "I alwus tell 'em it depends on what their perfession is. If they've arrived at the dignity o' sawin' wood, I alwus tell 'em to saw the biggest fust."

"If they asks why, an' they mostly does, I say, 'So's you'll only have the little sticks to saw when you gets tuckered out.'"

"An' I'll tell ye now," concluded Erastus, graciously, quite as if the camper had asked for "pointers" on a back yard job, "it's jes' the same with pillin'; put the big sticks to the bottom. It's mighty bilious exercise a liftin' of 'em to the top."—Youth's Companion.

Wasted Art.

In a certain banking establishment of California there is a wonderful oil painting which in a certain way represents a real waste of art.

This painting, which is a large one, shows several barrels of full size which are overflowing with money—gold and bank notes amounting in all to $3,000,000. The money is painted with remarkable accuracy, and when viewed from a proper distance looks like the real thing.

In fact, the excellence of the work is the real drawback to this picture. The treasury authorities have notified the bank officials that the painting is in violation of the law forbidding the reproduction of money tokens issued by the government, and that it may be confiscated unless it is withdrawn from exhibition. Manifestly the artist painted better than he knew.

Nodaway, Outside of Maryville, Voted on Local Option Question Saturday.

Nodaway county, outside of Maryville, went decisively against the sale of intoxicating liquor in the election Saturday by a majority of 1,730, in a total vote of 4,162. The votes were 2,946 dry, and 1,216 wet.

There were only three precincts in the county that gave a "wet" majority. They were South Lincoln and North and South Jefferson.

In September, 1907, Nodaway county voted on the local option question, and a total vote of 3,620 was cast, the "drys" carrying the county by over 600. Their majority in Saturday's election is nearly three times as big, or the sentiment of the county is nearly unanimous against the sale of intoxicating liquor. The vote by precincts follows:

TOMPSON IN FAILED BANK

Was Formerly Trust Officer and Director of Bank That Failed in Kansas City.

Four complaints growing out of the closing of the American Union Trust company at Kansas City recently were issued Saturday by Edward J. Curtin, assistant prosecuting attorney, and sent to Justice C. J. Welch for hearing. One of the accused men was J. W. Tompson, formerly a director of the bank, who is charged with obtaining money under false pretenses.

"The charges against Tompson and Richardson and Busch, two other accused men, are relative to a $5,000 loan made at the trust company last May," Mr. Curtin said. "Busch owned eighty acres of land in Nodaway county, worth about $4,000, with a $1,500 mortgage on the property. He was represented at the bank to be a wealthy land owner, easily worth $5,000, according to the information that I am acting on, and $5,000 was lent him on his note. I have a letter in which Richardson and Tompson agree to pay the note. I have learned that Busch has since transferred the land to his brother. He is said to have gone to Nebraska."

Tompson was at one time trust officer of the company, and also a member of the board of directors of the bank. He severed his connection with the bank some time last summer, it is said, and went to Florida in the interest of a Kansas City investment company. After the bank had been closed about two weeks Tompson returned to Kansas City, and at once sought John E. Swanger, state bank commissioner, saying he had heard he was wanted.

Tompson appeared in Justice C. J. Welch's court in Kansas City Monday morning.

REVIVAL MEETINGS

Opened Sunday at the First M. E. Church With Large Attendance.

The revival services at the First M. E. church opened Sunday, and Dr. Calfee, the evangelist, preached at both morning and evening services to large audiences. Dr. Calfee made a fine impression, and no doubt great interest will be taken in the meetings.

On Sunday afternoon Dr. Calfee spoke to the men and boys on "The up-to-date Movements of the Church for the Men and Boys." He gave a fine description of the work of the movement.

The meetings will continue every night this week at 7:30 o'clock. On Saturday night, instead of regular preaching service a boys' rally will be held in the basement of the church. On Thursday afternoon at 4:15 in the basement there will be a girls' rally service. There will be an afternoon meeting every afternoon at the church except Saturday, and all are invited to attend.

Evangelist Calfee has been in Maryville before. He was here twenty-five years ago, having come to attend the big rally that Sam Jones held here. Mr. Calfee was then living in Mt. Airy, Ia.

GRIEF KILLED HER

LEONARD'S MOTHER MOURNED HER SON'S ABSENCE.

CAME TO TAKE BODY BACK

Mrs. Richard Keefe of Galesburg, Ill., Identifies Wm. Leonard as Long Absent Brother.

The body of William M. Leonard, which laid at the Price-McNeal undertaking rooms for nearly a week as that of an unknown man, will be taken to Galesburg, Ill., Monday night over the Burlington for burial by the side of his mother, who died ten years ago, grieving and longing for his return or some word that would tell her he was living or dead.

Accompanying the body is an only sister of the deceased man, Mrs. Richard Keefe of Galesburg, and her husband and daughter, Miss Hazel Keefe. Mrs. Keefe, who is a farmer of near Galesburg, arrived in Maryville Sunday morning to make preliminary arrangements for the removal of the body and for still further proof that the body was indeed that of Mrs. Keefe's long lost brother. Mrs. Keefe and daughter arrived Monday morning. They were confident as soon as they had received the letter from Messrs. Price and McNeal, written upon the advice of Mrs. Jerry Vaughn, living north of Maryville, which contained a picture of the dead man, that it was Mrs. Keefe's brother, and when they looked on his face at the undertakers' rooms they were satisfied that it was the body of William Leonard.

A short funeral service was held at the undertakers' rooms Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock by Rev. Father Niemann of St. Patrick's church, and another service—8 o'clock mass—will be held Tuesday morning at St. Patrick's church by Father Niemann.

William M. Leonard was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leonard, who lived on a farm west of Galesburg. Their only other child was the daughter, Alice, who came to Maryville Monday to keep the promise made to a dying mother: "If you should ever hear of Willie's death, find his body and bring it and place it by father and me. And if he should ever return, be very good to him, and tell him how I longed to see him and how much we loved him."

Mrs. Keefe spoke very quietly this morning in talking of her brother, but one could see that her grief was too deep for many words, and her love for her brother too sacred to allow a single word of reproach for his unaccountable absence of nineteen years.

"I live in the home he left," she said, "and our two little girls, Margaret and Marion, 19 and 12 years old, are there awaiting to see the dead face of their Uncle Willie—whom they had always expected to see sometime—but not this way. He was the best and sweetest boy in the world. He always seemed happy and was liked by everybody. He liked to go out with the young people and was popular. Father's death occurred twenty-five years ago, and after his death mother clung to Willie and loved him more than ever. He at first worked in a grocery store after quitting school, and then took up railroading, and was a fireman on the Burlington out of Galesburg for two years. He was dissatisfied with that, however, and said he was going to look for something else that he liked better. He went away then and we never heard a thing of him but once about a year later, when Mr. Keefe saw him in Chicago. He said he wasn't coming home for some time and did not know when he would come. He was very proud, and I know he had such high aims that when things did not come as he thought they would he could not bear us to know that he was not succeeding, so he stayed away and did not even write to us. But his silence killed my mother, and it has sometimes seemed to me that I could not stand it if he did not write or come home. I have always believed that we would hear of his death if it should occur. I can never be grateful enough to Ella Brennan (Mrs. Vaughn), my old neighbor and schoolmate, for the interest she has taken in getting the word of his death to me."

William Leonard was born on a farm west of Galesburg, Ill., September 5, 1867, making him past 44 years of age. Though his life has not been the financial success he evidently wished it to be, he had lived a good moral life, for that was evident to the undertakers and to all who viewed the body.

When Mr. J. D. Frank, who sold Leonard some clothing the evening of his fatal fall from the Main street viaduct, was able to recall his name the third day after Leonard's death, Mrs. Vaughn told her husband she used to know a Leonard family back in Galesburg and invited on his coming to

Maryville to see the body and told him how old Will Leonard would be, and described his appearance so well that Mr. Vaughn, after seeing the body, insisted on her coming to town to see for herself. She remembered a mark in his eyebrow, or "cowlick," which was very noticeable, and his large blue eyes, and although she had not seen him for twenty years, she was quite certain that it was the body of Will Leonard, and such it proved to be.

Mrs. Vaughn speaks in the highest terms of the Leonard family, and says that Will Leonard was considered the handiest, best dressed and most desirable young man, socially and every other way, in the community.

The father of Mrs. Keefe and William Leonard died on his farm near Kinsley, Kan., where the family had moved for the benefit of both Mr. and Mrs. Leonard's health. Mr. Leonard's ailment was asthma. He was completely cured by the change, but he worked so hard putting out his orchard and small fruit that he brought on valvular heart trouble. One day while the daughter was out with her mother for their usual drive, Mr. Leonard died in his orchard a few minutes before their return. The family returned to the old home at Galesburg, and it is thought that the son grieved more deeply than they realized over his father's death. The father and son were strongly attached to each other, and after the father's death William was restless and did not seem to know what he wished to do.

KANE GOT LICENSE

CITY COUNCIL TOOK ACTION SATURDAY NIGHT.

ONLY SALOON IN COUNTY

Council Severely Criticized for Delay in Taking Action—Lippman Will Mandamus Court.

The drouth that Maryville experienced for four days last week came to an end Monday when John Kane opened his saloon for business, as he had a county and a city license.

The city council granted Kane a city license Saturday night at a special session all of the members present voting for it. They were F. C. Conrad, Frank Ewing, C. D. Hooker, Henry Foster, John Gray and Louis Gram. Kane had enough signers to his petition for a saloon and had the consent of the county court to run the saloon.

The action of the city council in giving Kane a dramshop license on Saturday night, or the night of the local option election in Nodaway county, is being criticised by many people here and over the county. Why they postponed their meeting for this purpose for four days is unknown, but it seems that the fair thing to have done would have been to take action on this petition on Tuesday night, after the county court had granted a license to Kane. John Kane now has the only saloon in Maryville and Nodaway county. Adolph Lippman is still working, and will mandamus the county court for his license.

Beat Folk Here by a Majority of 481 Votes in the Primary Election Saturday Afternoon.

2 LECTURES AT NORMAL

First Session of Short Course Opened With Good Attendance—Demonstrations Down Town.

The short course in agriculture opened at the Normal Monday morning at 9 o'clock, with about 150 students in attendance. The opening lecture on "Feeding Live Stock" was delivered by Prof. E. A. Trowbridge in the lecture room in the west wing of the third floor. Prof. Trowbridge's lecture was followed by Prof. C. H. Hutchison, who talked on seed corn. Prof. Hutchison told his class that on account of the dry weather the seed corn this year is not of as good a variety as of the average year.

Many of the regular agricultural students of the Normal are attending the course.

For the convenience of the students of the course the lecture that was to have been held in the afternoon will be placed in the morning. Although this will make the morning session last until 1 o'clock, this change in the schedule was made that the students may not have to return to the Normal in the afternoon after the demonstrations which are to be held in Gray's pavilion. The demonstrations will begin at 2 o'clock.

Admission will be free to all night lectures for the branch short course in agriculture, and the public is cordially invited to attend them.

BROUGHT DOWN TWO VICTIMS

But the Deer Hunter Got Surprise of His Life When He Examined Them.

One of the best hunting stories of the season comes from northern Wisconsin, where a prominent resident of Phillips, accompanied by a friend, slipped out of town one evening two days in advance of the legal opening day of the season for killing deer. His object was to hunt deer at night, by the air of a strong reflector, dark lantern. He succeeded in a way far beyond his most optimistic hopes in killing something, but his overwhelming surprise on first viewing the "game" may be better imagined than written, and his language was horrid. He drove his own team of horses, valued at $600, and some distance from town he turned into an abandoned logging road, traversing it for several miles. Then he tied up the team and prowled about in the woods for half an hour with his light.

Suddenly he heard a snort, and the light revealed a pair of glaring eyes from some animal a short distance away. In his excitement he handed the light to his friend and banded at the eyes. Down tumbled the animal, and instantly there was a commotion in the same spot, and the light revealed another pair of glaring eyes. The hunter quickly fired and the second animal dropped.

The hunters rushed forward with their light, and to their dismay found that both their horses were shot and killed. They had circled about and confronted the team in their ramblings.

Something Missing.

Life guards at a Jersey seaside resort tell with great glee of an incident that happened there last summer. A German, with his boy of ten, was standing at the rail of one of the piers, quite at the end thereof, when suddenly the youngster toppled through into the water. As no life guards were out that far at the time a well-dressed young collegian on the pier, without waiting to divest himself of shoes or clothing, jumped in and after battling with the waves for some minutes got the half-drowned boy to the beach. In the meantime the father had hastened from the pier.

The parent, however, bore himself with great coolness. As the rescuer placed the dripping lad at his parent's feet, the German calmly inquired: "Many thanks, but what have you done with his hat?"

Home Health Club

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER, LaPorte, Ind.

Preventable maladies—Dr. St. Clair Drake of the Chicago bureau of vital statistics, exhibited four panels at the opening of the City club lately, in which he demonstrated some startling facts connected with his specialty. The panels showed that out of 32,800 deaths in Chicago last year, 13,500 were caused by preventable diseases, that one baby out of five dies before 2 years of age, that many of the deaths from preventable diseases arise from bad ventilation. In 1911 there were 4,929 deaths, or 15 per cent of the total number of deaths in Chicago from pneumonia; in the same period there were 3,726, or 11 per cent from tuberculosis—consumption.

A great many persons laugh at the idea of prevention of disease. They say: "Do you suppose anyone is going to be sick just for the fun of it?" or, "How is anyone to avoid being sick if the disease gets after them?" And yet here is a scientific man, employed by a great city, who comes with indubitable facts and figures showing how frightful percentage of people in his bailiwick die from preventable diseases.

Any intelligent person knows that if he goes out in zero weather with his coat off and his collar thrown open and in summer shoes that he is going to get a severe illness—that he will probably "catch his death," as the old folks used to express it. Of course, this is an extreme example. But where are you going to draw the line? There are thousands of ways for obtaining disease that a strong, healthy person would laugh at. An old soldier who has a deep seated case of chronic rheumatism said to us a few days ago: "During the war I was that strong and healthy it seemed as if a cannon ball would have some trouble hurting me very much. Many a time after a long and fatiguing march of many miles, in the heat and dust, when we would go into camp at night, I would throw myself down in the wet grass that seemed to be the most comfortable place I could think of, to sleep. Older men would say, 'You'll pay for that, one of these days, youngster.' I could not understand why anything that didn't hurt me, right there and then, could hurt me years after, but I know now. If I had taken the trouble to cool off in even the same way that a sensible horse handler would have used to take care of his horse that had been on a heating dash; dried myself properly and cooled off by sensible degrees, the chances are a thousand to one that I wouldn't be hanging to this pole of a walking stick right now, and I wouldn't be having the pains that rack me day and night."

This is another extreme case. But let us tell you, careless one, that when you cram your stomach with what you consider luxuries, and eat a big meal every time the dinner bell rings, whether you want it or not; when you sleep in a hot, unventilated room—or even a cold, unventilated room—or take alcoholic or other unnatural stimulants; use tobacco in any unreasonable way, or become a coffee fiend, drink water that is not pure, or indulge in any excess, or expose yourself unnecessarily, to inclement weather, no matter how young and strong you are, you are laying yourself liable to one of the preventable diseases that Dr. Drake has shown up. And yet there is nothing much more contemptible in personal habit than "molly-coddling." The Home Health club does not advise that by any manner of means.

Be temperate, use common sense, fight for fresh, pure air and the same sort of water; cultivate good humor; be kind and helpful; "Do unto others as you would that others should do unto you" in which the Nazarene has said, "is all the law and the prophets," and the chances are that a preventable disease will never even reach the neighborhood of your good health.

Club Note.

Dear Doctor: Is there any cure for carbuncle? Have been troubled with them for the last five years. Had them removed three times and they are still growing and are very painful. I like your new department very much.

A carbuncle means a destruction of the skin and the tissues directly beneath. It is most common with elderly or feeble person, and produces severe constitutional symptoms. Occasionally more than one carbuncle may appear on the body at one time, and if so the constitutional symptoms are apt to be graver.

Poultice the spot with flaxseed. Sprinkle over with goldenseal. Have an incision made across the carbuncle, which should be cut deeply, and then apply the poultice as before, although it would be beneficial for you to mix it with a little powdered myrrh and glycerine. Apply around the edges compound tincture of myrrh. Change these poultices every four hours, also washing around the ulcerous surface with extract of witch hazel one ounce, borax one dram, warm water one pint. A small syringe should be used. The stream will wash away all accumulations. While suppuration last these poultices should be constantly applied. In order to keep up your general health and strength you should have a very nourishing diet, sufficient exercise and sleep in well ventilated rooms.

POWERS DEMAND INTERVENTION

England and Germany Are Reported Alarmed Over Mexican Situation.

HOLD AMERICA RESPONSIBLE

Monroe Doctrine Places Obligation on U. S.—Other Countries Said to Have Taken Similar Action—State Department Silent.

Washington, Feb. 12.—England and Germany, according to reports received here, have demanded of the United States that the American army intervene in Mexico and protect their interests there.

No official confirmation of this has yet been obtained, but there are reasons to believe that not only have these powers turned to America for protection in Mexico, but that other countries have made similar representations.

Under the Monroe doctrine no power may invade the soil of the Western hemisphere. This doctrine places the responsibility of the protection of foreign interests upon the United States and the obligation, the report says has been invoked.

Leaves No Alternative. Should these powers make their demand, there will be no alternative left to this country. The order for intervention would have to be issued.

The fact that these two countries have notified the United States that they look to this country for protection to their interests shows plainly enough that the reports of widespread revolt are not exaggerated.

A year ago when these countries turned to the United States for a guarantee that the rights of their citizens would be protected in Mexico, they put off the demand until the very last minute. Neither England nor Germany was disposed then to make the position of President Diaz any harder than necessary but, when it became evident that the Diaz government could offer no safety to any interest in the republic then these countries turned to the United States for protection of their interests.

The fact is not denied in official circles that the German ambassador has talked over the Mexican situation with Secretary Knox but the state department refuses to confirm the report that either Germany or England has demanded the United States that this country must go into Mexico and establish order.

"Respects Foreign Rights." Chihuahua, Mex., Feb. 12.—"Respect the rights of all private citizens and especially those of foreigners, since we want no international complications." This is the counsel given his followers by Inez Salazar, who has placed himself at the head of the rebels in the Galeana district, whose seat of government is in Casas Grandes.

Persons who arrived from Casas Grandes say that rebel bands proclaiming themselves adherents of Emilio Vasquez Gomez are scattered throughout the district. Salazar, who styles himself "colonel," has issued a manifesto almost identical to that of the mutineers at Juarez and naming the same junta of well-known Vasquezistas.

STABBED PENITENTIARY WARDEN

Just as Chaplain Was About to Pronounce Benediction, Negro Slashes Officer.

Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 12.—Just as the prison chaplain was about to pronounce the benediction at the close of the morning chapel service at the state penitentiary, Albert Prince, a negro, under sentence for assault with intent to kill, stabbed a deputy warden, E. D. Davis. The warden received six wounds, three of them severe gashes in the abdomen. Physicians say he probably will die.

The negro obtained the knife from the broom factory. He says that he had no particular grievances against Davis, but that he objected to having been deprived of certain liberties. He was under a 20-year sentence.

TO VISIT SOUTHERN REPUBLICS

Secretary Knox to Make Trip to Acquire Information Regarding Conditions in Central America.

Washington, Feb. 12.—For the purpose of solving diplomatic problems and acquiring more accurate information as to conditions in central and northern South America Secretary Knox, by direction of President Taft, will make a five-weeks' trip to the Spanish-American republics bordering the Caribbean sea and the Gulf of Mexico.

As now planned Mr. Knox will not visit Mexico, but that country may be included in the program before he returns during the first week of April.

Although the official announcement of the trip just made public at the White house gave no details it was made known that Havana would be Mr. Knox's first stop, and it was reported that in Cuba he might attempt to "solve the problem" that brought about hints of American intervention there a few weeks ago.

Brilliant Wedding in London. London, Feb. 12.—The most brilliant social function of the London season took place at noon today, when Lady Rosabelle St. Clair-Erskine, daughter of the earl of Rosslyn, was married to David Cecil Bingham, stepson of the former Mrs. Chaucer. The ceremony took place in the Guards' chapel, Wellington barracks, and was attended by a number of English army officers as well as the social elite of London. The bridesmaids were Lady Rosemary Lovson Gower, daughter of the duchess of Sutherland; Miss Lavinia Bingham; Miss Barbara Bingham; Miss Helen Porteous; Miss Sheila MacDougal and Miss Christine Guthrie.

STRIKERS SEND CHILDREN AWAY

Textile Workers' Little Ones to Be Cared for by New Yorkers.

PARENTS MAY BE PROSECUTED

Authorities at Lawrence, Mass., Propose to Act Under Compulsory Education Laws—All Are to Be Cared for by Workmen.

New York, Feb. 12.—With red flags waving and bands blaring "The Marseillaise" 119 bewildered children were literally mobbed by the friendliest mob that ever was formed in America. The children were those whose mothers and fathers are braving the hardships of the textile workers' strike in Lawrence, Mass.

The children were sent here to be housed and fed while parents and older brothers and sisters fight out their differences with the Lawrence mill owners.

Taken to Labor Temple. They were marshaled into an elevated train and taken to the Labor Temple in Eighty-fourth street.

There the crowd had grown until entrance to the temple was barred and police reserves were summoned. Cold and hungry, unconscious of the attention they were attracting, once they reached the waiting supper tables, every little one fell to the work of devouring the first real meal many of them had faced since the strike at Lawrence began.

Mrs. Belmont's Offer Refused.

Before the arrival of the train that brought the children, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont went to the station and asked for several of the children, saying she would take them to her home and provide for them indefinitely. The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant of the Church of the Ascension sent a request for 25 children; Dr. James Warbasso of Brooklyn asked for six. All these requests were denied because of previous offers of temporary homes among the working people of the city.

Prosecutions Threatened.

Lawrence, Mass., Feb. 12.—Lawrence mill strikers, already worked up to a fever pitch by the manner in which they have been overawed by the military, were further incensed at the report that municipal authorities are planning, if possible, to prosecute every striker who sent his child to New York to be cared for during the strike. If the authorities find legal action can be taken they propose to begin prosecutions under the compulsory education laws. The officials also hope to be able to prosecute the strike leaders, who suggested sending the children away.

WATERMAN HEIR IS A BELLBOY

Chose Number "Thirteen" When He Went to Work—Gets Half Kansan's Estate.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 12.—Nat Silverman, bellboy at the Hotel Alexandria has fallen heir to $150,000 of the $200,000 estate left by his uncle, Joseph Waterman, near Hutchinson, Kan. It is stated that the remainder of the estate will be divided equally between a stepson of Waterman's and another nephew.

At the opening of the Alexandria Silverman applied for a place and asked for badge No. 13, saying he preferred not to work unless he obtained that number.

Silverman says he will get married. The girl in the case is Miss Agnes Fennelson, daughter of A. F. Fennelson, a banker of Hutchinson, Kan.

GIVES POLICY HOLDER A CHANCE

Ruling of Kansas Insurance Commission Will Improve Conditions of All New Policies.

Topeka, Feb. 12.—I. S. Lewis, state insurance commissioner, made a ruling that will improve the conditions of all life insurance policies written in Kansas after March 1. Many companies are writing policies that provide for a complete forfeiture of all premium payments, or part forfeiture in case of the death of one premium. The order issued by the insurance commissioner provides that in case a policyholder defaults in paying a premium, after having paid premiums for three years, that the insurance companies must give paid up insurance or cash according to definite insurance ratings.

LABOR WANTS TO RULE ENGLAND

Not Satisfied With Gains Already Made, Wants More.

Propagandists Busy all Over Country Threaten Strikes Unless Given Control—Starting Daily Papers.

London, Feb. 12.—Since the Liberal party returned to power in 1905, and particularly since it has depended for its political life on the support of the Labor and Nationalist parties, more legislation of the kind advocated by trades unions has been enacted than in any similar period in the history of the country. Still, labor or at least the Independent Labor party is not satisfied and has arranged a program which contains expectations much greater.

Ben Turner, ex-president of the party says its business now is to make it the dominating, controlling, guiding and ruling party of the state.

To Stop Unemployment.

For the immediate future the party's platform contains planks looking to the further improvement of the conditions of labor; a right to work bill, that is a law making it obligatory upon the government to provide work for those desiring it; the abolition of night work as far as possible; a land policy, which would place the workers on the land until the nationalization of land has been accomplished; the nationalization of railways and mines and bills for the improvement of the housing of working men.

Not for Women Suffrage.

On the extension of the franchise there is a wide difference of opinion among the leaders. At a recent conference the delegates from the miners' federation let it be known that they would be satisfied with the bill to be introduced by the prime minister granting manhood suffrage, and would not vote in favor of a motion supporting women suffrage.

The propagandists are busy in the country, rallying men to the unions and threatening strikes unless non-unionists are prevented from working side by side with unionists.

To Dominate Politics.

Two labor daily papers are about to make their appearance. One, the Daily Herald, is to take the place of the Morning Leader, which is to be amalgamated with the Daily News. The other is to be the Daily Citizen, and it will be the official organ of the party. A fund of $750,000 is being raised to make a start, and the party has subscribed $50,000 toward this.

The leaders have set themselves the task of increasing the labor representation in the house of commons from 42 to 112 and with this concrete party they believe they can dominate not only home but also foreign policies.

Died to Save His Wife.

Seymour, Ind., Feb. 12.—While trying to rescue his wife from their burning home, Charles King, 70 years old, a Civil war veteran, died suddenly of heart trouble, induced by excitement. Mrs. King was confined to her bed with a broken leg. Her charred body was recovered.

Ask T. R. to Run.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—A memorial was sent to Theodore Roosevelt asking him, on behalf of a number of people to become a candidate for president. The action was taken by the governors of seven states, after a conference all day with men from every section of the country.

Army Ball March 16.

Fort Leavenworth, Kan., Feb. 12.—The annual ball of the West Point graduates stationed at army posts in this section of the country probably will be held in Kansas City March 16. Officers here who are graduates of that military school are now making plans for the ball.

WOMAN TO LEARN FARMING

TAKES COLLEGE COURSE TO PREPARE FOR MANAGEMENT.

Owens Her Own Place of 150 Acres and Will Operate it Herself.

Columbia, Mo., Feb. 12.—A young woman, the owner of a 150-acre farm in Boone county has just entered the University of Missouri college of agriculture to learn how to manage the land and make it a paying proposition. She is Miss Pauline Chandler, the daughter of John Chandler, a wealthy farmer and owner of the Courtland farm a few miles out of Columbia. She is the first woman to enroll in the class of farm management at the university.

Besides farm management Miss Chandler is studying crop production, landscape gardening, crop rotation, plant propagation and field crop management.

This coming summer the young woman farmer expects to raise a carload of baby beavers.

Miss Chandler's farm was given to her by her father. He will have nothing to do with the management and all that she makes will be hers to do with as she pleases. She says that she will not import any of her stock from the West or other places, but will raise all of it for fattening.

Miss Chandler is 20 years old. Last spring she won second prize in horseback riding at the "county fair" of the students in the college of agriculture. The contest was open to all women students in the university.

THE CLOSED DOOR

By Temple Bailey

(Copyright, 1911, by Associated Literary Press.)

Through his open window Bernard could hear the sound of a woman weeping. He leaned out into the silent summer night.

"Who is it?" he asked, softly. "Can I be of service?"

There was silence for a moment, then a timid voice responded:

"If you could only let me in."

"Wait," Bernard whispered, and went down and opened the door.

A girl stood outside. She was all in white and wore her satiny dark hair wound youthfully about her head. There were signs of tears on her cheeks.

"Will you come in?" Bernard asked. She shrank back. "Oh, no, I did not mean that I wanted to come into your house. It is this other door that is closed against me."

With her hand she indicated the door adjoining, which led into the next house. "My uncle," she explained, "has locked me out. He wants me to do a thing I will not do, and until I consent he says I shall not come into his house. What shall I do?"

"Have you any friends?" Bernard asked.

"Have you any money?" Bernard asked.

"Yes; he gave me some. But it is so dark, I dare not go to a hotel at this time of night. I am afraid."

"And you cannot stay here—if my housekeeper had not gone—but I'll find a way." He smiled down at her.

"Oh, if you could," she cried, hopefully.

"Is your uncle in?" he asked.

"Yes, but his room is in the front of the house. This is the garden entrance. I know he is there, because I can see his shadow on the other wall as he bends over his book."

"Good," said Bernard. "Come in here with me, and I'll find you a way to your room, and when you get there

you can go to bed in the dark, and he will never be wiser. And in the morning you can come over here again, and we will plan together."

He led the way to the second story. It was an easy matter for him to lift her over the high railing to the porch which separated the two houses.

"Good night," he said, and in the dark she whispered, "Thank you so very much," and left him tingling with the pleasure of her praise.

He was ready and waiting when at dawn she crept out on the porch to be lifted back to his side and escorted downstairs, where he had a pot of coffee, toast and eggs waiting for her.

"We will have some breakfast," he said, "then we will hunt up my mother's old housekeeper. She married a farmer and lives about a half mile out. I am afraid I shall have to ask you to walk."

She walked by his side through the unawakened streets lightly and fearlessly. "I'm so glad to get away," she said as she looked back at the closed door which had so restlessly shut her out. "I shall never come back if I can find anything to do."

"Would you mind," he hesitated, "telling me why you were shut out?"

She blushed. "He wanted me to marry a man I don't like," she said. "Uncle has strange ideas. He says that love can come after marriage."

"Not for you," he cried, looking down at the lovely face upraised to his, the gray eyes with shadowy lashes, the burnished hair. "Not for you."

"And I wouldn't. And last night I said 'No' finally, and sent the man away. And uncle was furious and turned me out."

"It would serve him right if we should frighten him a bit, wouldn't it?" asked Bernard. "If you'll stay quietly on the farm he will wonder what has become of you. Of course he expects to find you back this morning begging at the door."

When Bernard returned at noon that same day he saw the old man walking restlessly in the garden.

"Have you seen my niece," he

questioned suspiciously, as Bernard came up.

"I heard some one last night sobbing in the garden," said the young man.

"It was Lois," said the other. "I meant to play a-a joke on her. She must have taken me seriously and gone away."

"What was your joke?" Bernard questioned gravely.

"I made her think I was angry, and locked the door on her."

Bernard looked toward the river that flowed sluggishly at the foot of the garden.

"She might have gone that way," he said.

The old man clutched at his arm. "You don't mean—you don't mean—" he quavered.

"Who knows?" said the astute Bernard, and shrugged his shoulders.

After that the old man frantically appealed to him. "Will you help me look for her?" But Bernard shook his head. "If you found her, what then?" he asked.

Then Bernard told him, "She is with a farmer's wife on the outskirts of the town. But you must not go to her. She is not in a mood to forgive you."

Thoroughly humbled, the old man asked, "What shall I do?"

"Write her a note, and I will take it," said Bernard, and thus it came about that he was the messenger between these two.

"I will never go back," the girl declared passionately. "I must find some work to do. I want to earn my living, and be free."

"Martha is glad to have you with her," he said; "don't worry."

But she was still burdened with the thought of her dependence, until one day he came and found her radiant.

"I am going to make marmalade and sell it to the people where Martha's husband delivers butter. I have a delicious recipe. It was my mother's. She was a California woman, and her orange marmalade was famous. And even if I begin in a small way I can pay Martha something."

His heart rejoiced to see her happy, and he rejoiced, too, to know that she would stay where he might see her daily.

One morning her uncle went with him to the farm.

"Come back with me, Lois," he begged, but she shook her head.

"I may seem hard," she said, "but there is always before me the vision of that closed door, and of you on the other side of it, deaf to all my pleadings."

Bernard and the old man grew to be good friends. They sat often in the garden and talked of Lois. "If I could only have her back," the old man would sigh.

One morning Bernard said, "I am going to ask her to come—but if she does, she must live on my side of the garden."

"You mean?" the old man gasped.

"That I want to marry her," said Bernard.

"Go ask her—go ask her," the other urged, eagerly. "Maybe she will do for you what she would not do for me."

But when Bernard asked her, Lois shook her head. "You are sorry for me," she said, "that's why you are doing it."

He took both of her hands in his. "I shall be very sorry for myself," he said gently, "if you close the door of your heart against me. Just think of me as standing without, begging to be let in."

Woodpile Philosopher.

Erastus Johnson, the only colored man in Kobrook-in-the-Hills, has thought out many of the secrets of easing the toll that he knows best, and is ever ready to impart them to others.

"When they come to me for advice," he said recently to one of the summer campers, "I always tell 'em it depends on what their perfection is. If they've arrived at the dignity of 'sawin' wood, I always tell 'em to saw the biggest first."

"If they ask why, an' they mostly does, I say, 'So's you'll only have the little sticks to saw when you gets tuckered out.'"

"An' I'll tell ye now," concluded Erastus, graciously, quite as if the camper had asked for "pointers" on a back yard job, "it's jes' the same with pillin'; put the big sticks to the bottom. It's mighty bilious exercise a-littin' of 'em to the top."—Youth's Companion.

Wasted Art.

In a certain banking establishment of California there is a wonderful oil painting which in a certain way represents a real waste of art.

This painting, which is a large one, shows several barrels of full size which are overhauling with money—gold and bank notes amounting in all to $3,000,000. The money is painted with remarkable accuracy, and when viewed from a proper distance looks like the real thing.

In fact, the excellence of the work is the real drawback to this picture. The treasury authorities have notified the bank officials that the painting is in violation of the law forbidding the reproduction of money tokens issued by the government, and that it may be confiscated unless it is withdrawn from exhibition. Manifestly the artist painted better than he knew.
